The Bui Gallery - an art gallery in Paris, France that specializes in Vietnamese contemporary art, will open a branch in Hanoi this April. Works from established artists and emerging talents will be displayed in a beautiful colonial-era house.

The Bui Gallery will inaugurate its opening with an exhibition called "Who do You think We are ?" that aims to define the identity of Vietnamese art and what it means to be an artist in Vietnam today. The event will feature works by some of the country's most exciting young artists. The show opens on April 7th, 2009 at 23 Ngo Van So Street, Hoan Kiem District, Hanoi. www.thebuigallery.com
